CHAPTER IX.-CONTINUED. Sarah greeted me effusively. The good soul seemed to have a constant ear that each time she saw me would be the last.

"Can you let me have a saw, a chisel and a hammer?" I asked:

"Ach, yes. Ilud vhat for, Nel?" "I am going to find out what Is In that cellar," I answered.

"How you ged in?" "By cutting through the floor." "Dat will be hard work, Nel. De timber under de floor la awful thick." "I know that. But I have plenty of time, and so will be able eventually to get through." The tools were produced, and I started homeward, Sarah sending after me an earnest appeal for earefulness and the avoldance of danger.

I intended to commence the task of getting into the sealed apartment immediately upon my arrival home. The thought that danger of some kind might lark in the cellar would not deler me. And the pissol-shot I had heard the last night seemed to ludicate that there might be a degree of peril in the work.

I did not like the idea of the dank, musty odors ascending Into my sleeping apartment, but I could easily remove to one of the spacious chambers upstairs, and thus escape them. On arriving at the house, I took the tools lute my room. I looked over the where the hole should be made, deter- floor. mined to begin over in one corner. Beme to commence opera-

Balfour, Sir William Haryours, the dake of Butland, the earl of Kimberley, Lord Rendel and Mr. Amistead Behind the coffin were the Gladstone family, the sons, young grandsons, private secretaries, physiladies. Last of all came a pathetic group of old villagers of Hawarden. England, conducted the bishop of London to the coffin, where he offered a brief prayer. Then the coffin was raised upon the shoulders of the bearers and the procession moved slowly from the hall to the abbey.

Outside a vast throng filled the whole neighborhood and every roof and winlow was crowded with spectators. After a short service in the church the remains were conveyed to the grave. It is in the very center of the porth transept. it was at the feet of the statue of tiladstone's greatest rival. Lord Braconstield.

HOW RELIEF CAME.

From Cole County Democrat, Jefferson City, Mo.

When la grippe visited this section, about seven years ago, Herman H. Eveler, of 8th W. Main St., Jellerson, Mo., was one of the victims, and has since been troubled with the after-effects of the disease. He is a well-known contractor and hunder, a business requiring much mental and physical work. A year ago his health began to fail, and he was obliged to discontinue work. That he lives to-slay is almost a miracle. He says:

"I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and a general debility. My back also pained me severely.

A GREAT REMEDY.

Greatly Tested. Greatly Recommended.

The loss of the hair is one of the most serious losses a woman can undergo. Beautilist hair gives many a woman as claim to benety which would be utterly wanting it the locks were short and scanly. It is almost asserious a loss when the natural hue of the hair hegans to lade and the shining tresses of classinut and allowed their former brightness. Such a loss is no longer a necessity. There is one remedy which may well be called a great remedy by reason of its great success in stopping the laiting of the hair cleansing the scalp of dandruff, and restoring the lost color to gray or faded tresses. Irr. Ayer's Hair Vigor is a significant and reliable preparation, in use in thousands of homes, and recommended by everyone who has tested it and experienced the remarkable results that lollow is use. It makes hair grow. It restores the original color to hair that has turned gray or faded out. It slops hair from falling, cleanses the scalp of dandruff, and grey hair, and am thoroughly convinced that it is the hest on the market. Whiting that I ever tried can touch it. It affords me great pleasure to recommend it to the public."—Faank M. Grove, Faunsdale, Ala.
